

Sand Color in Princess Effect the Real Thing

The Horse Show has been the attraction of a week in New York. The horses groomed until they shone and in the pink of training came first in the minds of the people, but the clothes worn by the women came a close second.

Designers from all over New York assembled there to note what the society women favored for the event of the early winter, and to temper their new designs accordingly.

The boxes were filled with a crowd of people dividing their attention between the horses and the clothes worn by other women. With fewer Parisian styles the trend of fashion is a question much more interesting to the greater number of women than it has ever been before.

A Dress in Semi-Princess Effect of Sand-Colored Broadcloth

The suits which were the most prominent were those made with a coat having a long and rippling tunic. These were usually worn with the fuller skirts which rippled out beneath them. On all were deep bands of something, fur usually, and braid at times, to border the bottom of the tunic and skirt. This fur was often skunk, sometimes fitch, kolinsky or sable, but the most popular was beaver.

A sand-colored broadcloth suit, made with a coat close fitting at the shoulders and flaring out at the knees, had a skirt with a band of beaver around it at least fifteen inches wide and possibly as wide as eighteen inches.

The fuller skirts were in evidence, showing that there is no doubt about the revival of the straight full skirts of crinoline days, and among the coats was one which reminded me of the old-fashioned dolman.

A semi-fitted effect is to be seen in dresses that is a distinct reminder of the princess dress. The illustration developed in sand-colored broadcloth, although far from being a princess, shows a combined yoke and girdle which fits around the waist and hips in a princess manner. The dress is made without trimming, the only variation in its simplicity being the chiffon sleeves and the flaring collar of chiffon. The skirt flares out in the accepted fashion at the ankles, showing the new breadth skirts are taking. Cloth-covered buttons trim the yoke under the arms.

The second illustration shows a dress made on lines more similar to the princess. The dress is made of blue charmeuse, with skirt and waist in one. At the waistline it is shirred into the outline of the figure. A sash of a darker shade of the same material is brought around the front off the waist and tied in a low waist line and serves to break the princess effect. Buttons covered with the same material as the sash fasten the dress down the front.

Sand color was the shade of many of the most stylish suits. One suit of sand color had a jacket that was rather close fitting, quite tailored in its effect, the skirt was mediumly cut full, and circular and without trimming. It was trimly short and also showed shoes with the uppers, and backs of sand-colored cloth to match the dress and the front of the shoes of black patent leather. A cunning little round hat of sand-colored velvet trimmed with a narrow band of beaver fur was worn with this suit which all was most complete from the soft crown of the hat to the sand-colored heels of the shoes.

Velvet was in evidence in black and midnight blue. This fabric has been most fashionable all fall and winter, for both evening and afternoon dresses, and is much less trying in the deep blue which is so new, than in the black. The soft quality of the velvet, which is more adaptable to draping than the velvets of old.

The black velvet hat has been extremely smart since last summer when New York startled even itself by wearing velvet toques in broiling weather. The black, however, is giving way to the dark blue velvet. The hats are made in just the same way and trimmed in the same manner. The sailor shape is the most popular, and the ostrich fringe is taking the place of the fringe like trimmings of monkey fur which was the rage in the fall.

The Belgian soldiers' cap has been used as the basis for a charming little toque worn by a charmingly dressed young woman at the Horse Show. It was rather round in shape and flattened over one side of the head, running to a point at the crown. A long straight quill ran straight up the back. It suits the fashionable coiffure very well indeed.

It is only once in a while in the history of dress that it becomes the young girl of the times. The tight skirt slashed to give room for walking had no place in the young girl's wardrobe. In fact, she looked very much out of place in it. But the full skirts of the winter's mode, with or without the long tunic, are extremely appropriate to the slimmest of youth. So is the long Russian coat belted at the hips and blouses which are an off-spring of the Balkan middie, the jumper and the basque. The large flat hat is infinitely more becoming to the girlish face than the small severe ones which have been the rage and still are to a great extent.

A Princess Dress with Fulness Shired from Bust to Hips

Some of the serge frocks for wear at school are especially good for the little girl under twelve. They are often made with a waist and skirt in one and unbelted. The waist is cut away beneath the arms, and the front and back are cut in U-shape. The edges of this frock are bound with wide black silk braid, and a cunning little skirt of linen is worn beneath the dress in place of the conventional guimpe. The sleeves of this skirt are long, finishing with turned back cuffs which fasten with cuff links. A collar is made to turn over also and is finished with the links.

The coat which is made to button straight down the front with a wide rolling collar, is decidedly suitable for a youngster. It is warm, comfortable and most becoming to the childish face.

30,000 Voices

And Many Are the Voices of Medina People

Thirty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney Pills for relief from backache, kidney and bladder ills. They sal it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Medina people are in the chorus. Here's a Medina case.

Mrs. Fred Schmidt, 531 W. Smith Road, Medina, O., says: "My back was lame and sore for at least five years. If I stood for any length of time, the pain was almost unbearable. I always felt tired and had no energy to do my housework. When I used Doan's Kidney Pills, I was surprised and delighted with the results. Every kidney ailment left me and in a short time I was well. I haven't needed any kidney for quite a while. I am pleased to confirm the public endorsement I have given Doan's Kidney Pills before."

Price 50c, at all leaders. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Schmidt had. Foster-McBurn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

TURNIPS AND HORSE RADISH

In the Service and Regulatory Announcements of the Bureau of Chemistry of the department, a statement is published that the addition of turnip to prepare horseradish will be considered an adulteration under the Food and Drug Act, unless the product is labeled as a compound, with a plain statement of its ingredients.

In the same publication, the department expresses an opinion that the addition of artificial color to smoked fish, as usually practiced, results in concealing inferiority and is, therefore, a violation of the Food and Drug Act, even though the use of artificial color is declared upon the label.
